

BOULSBURY & HYDE

BOULSBURY FARMHOUSE

KARIN & GERALD FFISKE

"state of the art" practices with beef, 400 sow herd and producing barley, wheat and grass seed. Although methods of farming have altered, the crops are not dissimilar to those itemised in the inventory mentioned above.

HYDE CROSS HYDE FARM

DOMINIC WIGGINS

Karin, Gerald, Amanda & Katrina ffiske
Three children, one son and two daughters.

Son married Italian, two children - boy 6, girl 3.

Family have interest in electronics manufacturing business in Salisbury.

One daughter in publishing (own business), one in public relations living in London. Lived here for ten years

Existing house built in 1744 as an extension of two older cottages. An inventory exists itemising the contents of that older house (inventory approx. 1560) including the clothing, kitchen utensils and furniture. The same inventory itemises the farm stock - including numbers of cattle, geese etc. and the volume of wheat etc. in storage. The house is owned by the Longford Estate since 1948.

As we have been in the are for only ten years and live outside the village centre, we can contribute little to this section. The farm that surrounds the house, also owned by the Estate but farmed in partnership with Rob & Kathy Shepherd is active, productive and follows

A new brick and slate house to replace a corrugated iron clad bungalow built in 1900.

The three or four Yew trees 100 yds behind the modern red brick house called "Hyde View" (halfway between Hyde Farm and Biddlesgate Farm) marked the boundaries between "two gentlemen's properties" in the Domesday Book.